ROKER NAT HATCH'S DEATH

RONER LEVY AND A JURY INQUIRING INTO IT THIS AFTERNOON.

Great Crawd of Curious People Fill the Coroner's Office and an Adjournment Is inde to the City Court-Capt. Rellly and His Detectives on Hand Early-Mrs.

The inquest, which is expected to make ar the circumstances leading up to of Broker Nathaniel w. death was begun by Coroner by this afternoon. The Corener had demined that the investigation should be searching one, and a jury of exceptional reectability had been summoned.

Public curiosity was aroused to an extraor nary pitch by the facts already known as the career of the Scofields, as well by the anticipated revelations as to their lings with Broker Hatch.

The narrow room devoted to inquests at he Coroner's office was growded to suffocaon and many were unable to obtain admis

The crush became so great that before any dence was taken Coroner Levy adjourned he hearing to the City Court Chambers.

Among the spectators were Mr. Walter T. Intch and several other members of the smily of the dead man, D. C. Ferris, acquin, the restaurateur, and J. T. Brown, Charles W. Scofield, the injured husband idled into the room quietly and as though be shrank from the gaze of the crowd. He looks many years older than his declared age, which is forty-eight.

She was attired in exquisite taste in a dress f dark blue silk, with fine black lace. She ried to look composed, but hid her face frequently with a large black fan. She has ged very much under the excitement of the set few days.

aged very much under the excitement of the past few days.

Before she had been seated five minutes a deputy sheriff pushed his way through the court-room and served her with a summons in the suit of S. B. Solomon against her for $375.47 for furniture supplied to her in 1885 and not paid for.

Mr. Buck appeared for Mrs. Scofield only. The District-Attorney's office was represented by ex-Judge Gunning S. Bedford.

After Coroner Levy had briefly explained that Mr. Hatch was found dead in the yard of 64 West Twentieth street on Tuesday morning. Officer James McCormick took the stand.

He testified that at 1.30 A. M. on the morn-stand.

He testified that at 1.30 A. M. on the morning the body was found Mrs. Scofield called him into the house from the corner of Sixth avenue and got him to break open the bathroom door. As they burst it open the key fell on the inside.

At that time Mr. Scofield was sitting on the adjoining stoop. McCormick got into conversation with him, and Scofield said he was watching for a man named Hatch who was inside the house.

plied: "It is Mr. Ferris." "Oh. no, it isn't."
he said. "It is Mr. Hatch's voice."
"I am going to stay here and keep my eyes open so that I can make out a clear case for a divorce." said Mr. Scofield to the officer.

A sensation was created when McCormick said that when he forced the door the rear said that when he forced the door the rear window was shut down.

If this testimony is unshaken the theory that Hatch's death was accidental or suicidal will have to abandoned, as he could not have closed the window after his fall.

In her statement on Tuesday Mrs. Scofield said the window was open when the door was forced.

In her statement on Tuesday Mrs. Scofield said the window was open when the door was forced.

Office Stephen J. Reardon told of his finding the dead body in the yard and of the information given to him at the time by Mr. and Mrs. Scofield.

He also found the bathroom window closed. He opened it and went out on the extension. He noticed that one of the branches of the tree was broken off. On the roof of the extension were two empty brandy bottles.

Under cross-examination by Lawyer Buck the policeman said that Mr. Hatch were an overcoat and his hat was on the floor of the yard near by. He seemed to be dressed for the street.

The jurors betrayed much curiosity as to the street.

The jurors betraved much curiosity as to the way Mr. Scofield took the news of Mr. Hatch's death. Officer Reardon said Mr. Scofield's first remark was: "I knew it was he who was with my wife. I have suspected him for a long time.

Sconeid's first remark was: "I knew it was he who was with my wife. I have suspected him for a long time.

Charles Banspach, the painter, told what he knew of the finding of the body.

Detective Thomas J. Hayes said that many small branches of the tree, especially those near the ledge of the extension roof, were broken off. It seemed to him as if some one on the roof had tried to catch hold of the tree to help him get down. The wood was retten and dry, and broke easily.

Hubert Guinon, a hair importer, lives at 69 West Nineteenth street, and his rear windows overlooks the yard of the Scofield's house. He said he happened to look out of his window at 7 o'clock, when he saw the body.

"I saw he was dead," said Mr. Guinon, "and I ran out to notify the people in the house. I found the front door open and went inside. But then I thought it would not do to be found there, so I went back to the stoop and waited till Mrs. Scofield came."

Mr. Guinon told her that there was a body in the yard. The information seemed to sgitate her very much. She rushed to the Window and screamed: "My God! it's Mr. A murmur ran through the crowded courtrooms at the reach the said the conditions at the conditions at the crowded courtrooms as the reach the conditions and the crowded courtrooms at the conditions and the crowded courtrooms at the conditions and the crowded courtrooms at the conditions and conditions at the crowded courtrooms at the conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions are at the conditions and conditions and conditions are sent to the crowded courtrooms at the conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions and conditions are at the conditions and conditions a Mandow and screamed: "My God! it's Mr. Hatch!"

A murmur ran through the crowded courtroom as the name "Lill'an E. Scofield" was called, and the woman who was the cause of all the trouble took the stand. She stood composedly as she kissed the Bible and then took ber seat. She gave her testimony in clear and musical tones.

She told in detail the story of her doings from the time she left her house at 10 o'clock Monday morning until her arrest.

At Mms. Fanny's, she said, Mr. Hatch appeared to be in the best of spirits. He laughed and joked with Mms. Fanny, and was so delighted with a story she told of Louis Napoleon and the coup d'etat that he ordered a second bottle of champagne. Her testimony continued thus:

It was about 11.45 o'clock when we left the resistant, and Mr. Heretowan.

It was about 11.45 o'clock when we left the res-nurant, and Mr. Hatch excepted me towards some. When we got to the corner of Twenty-third street I said to him: ''Now I have but three blocks further to go. Suppose you take the ele-vated uptown and let me make my own way

He insisted on taking her home, and when he got there she invited him to look at the repairs in progress. She lit all the gas jets so that he could see. He asked for the toilet room and went upstairs.

Afterwards he wanted a glass of water, and she got it for him. He admired the room, and said it was a very nice bathroom.

M'QUAID SAYS HE IS INNOCENT.

Denying Any Share in the Murder of Lillie Boyle and Anxions to Be Tried.

Ex-Alderman Thayer, of Worcester, Mass., counsel for young Tom McQuaid, who has been indicted with Dixon R. Cowie for the cruel murder of Lillie Hoyle, called at Police Headquarters this morning and had a long conference with his client. McQuaid was cool and collected and assured his lawyer of his innocence. He reiterated to Mr. Thayer what he had previously said to Chief In-what he had previously said to Chief Inspector Byrnes.

'I am conscious of my own innocence," he said. "I know nothing whatever of Lillie Hoyle's sad death, and I am anxious to go to Worcester and face a jury on the question of guilt. But what will an acquittal avail me now? My future is overshadowed. Ten years of hard study go for naught, All my efforts to build up a reputation are ruined, and my life is blackened by this terrible and false accusation. I shall waive all rights and cheerfully return to Massachusetts with the officers who bear the requisition papers from Gov. Ames. Life has no charm for me now."

The papers for the extradition of McQuaid will arrive here this evening, and to-morrow he will probably be turned over to State Detective Whitney, of Boston.

Assistant District-Attorney Bedford opposed the motion. He said that nine days only had elapsed since the finding of the indictment. There was also a question of the sanity of the woman to be raised at the instance of her relatives, he understood.

Lawyer Townsend said that this insanity dodge wouldn't work. He did not propose to plead insanity or demurto the indictment, but to proceed to trial.

The little lawyer here brought out a new fact in the case by stating that he was employed to defend the Madame and the "General" by Lawyer Marsh, their dupe.

Col. Fellows will be precluded from trying the case against Ann O'Delia if it is proceeded with on the day named, as he will be busy in the Kerr case.

Mayer Hewitt Would Condescend to Meet the Other Subway Commissioners The lively session of the Subway Commisioners in the Mayor's office yesterday was the subject of much discussion at the City Hall to-day.

Mayor Hewitt reached his office early and started in to read the newspaper reports of the circus. He told an Evening World reporter that he would adhere to his resolution not to attend future meetings of the commission unless public duty should compel him to do so.

sion unless public duty should compel him to do so.

"If the public interests should be threatened," he remarked, "I would condescend to attend a meeting. However, the Commissioners are only empowered to spend the moneys of corporations, and the exippenses of the Board are met by the city."

Mayor Hewitt went on to say that several of the newspaper reports were "doctored" to place him in an unenviable light. "I suppose," he continued, "I will have to stand abuse until my term expires."

QUICK DEATH IN THE WIRE.

AN ELECTRIC LIGHT LINEMAN INSTANTLY KILLED ON BROADWAY.

He Touched a Bunch of Wires Supposed to Be Dead, and in a Moment All Was Over with Him-The Current Was Said to Have Seen Shut Off. and Was Within Reach of a Number of Employees.

The deadly electric light wire has added another name to its long list of victims. At 10.15 A. M., to-day T. H. Murray, a lineman attached to Station B of the Brush electric ight system called at the office of Bierman Heidelberg & Co., wholesale dealers in clothing at 616 and 618 Broadway, and asked permission to step outside their front windows to repair a wire. He had not been at work more than three minutes when he staggered and fell prostrate across the sill of one of the windows.

A moment later Policeman Apple, who was in Broadway, happened to look up and saw in Broadway, happened to look up and saw the body lying in the window, and near it a little puff of smoke curling upward.

It was learned then that after stepping out upon the stone coping behind the sign of the clothing house hiurray seized a coll of wires which extended from the sign to a pole on the opposite side of the street, and received the full force of an electric shock, which caused instant death.

The wire had burned into two fingers of the right hand, had consumed the flesh and left the bone exposed. His face was blue, his eyes closed and his teeth set as if he had braced himself for an unusual effort.

The policemen lifted the body from the window and laid it upon the stone floor to await the arrival of the Coroner. The dead man's name was revealed by his record-book, which was found in one of his pockets and which was marked "T. H. Murray, station B. Elizabeth street," in red stencil letters.

On another paper was a record of his morning's work. cut off for several months.

The bunch of wires which he seized was supposed to be composed of dead wires, as no current of electricity was furnished to the building. In order to steady himself Muray probably grasped them without the slightest suspicion that it meant death to slightest suspicion that it meant death to do so.

There are many other electric wires where Murray met his death and the members of the firm of Bierman, Heidelberg & Co. and their employees felt considerable alarm when they considered that any of them might have handled one of the wires in an unguarded moment, and met the same terrible fate which befell poor Murray.

Murray lived at 45 Madison street, He had been many years in the employ of the company.

SEE-SAW IN THE JURY BOX.

It is the Turn of Kerr's Counsel New to Make Use of Challenges.

Interest in the trial of Thomas B. Kerr, for bribing the Aldermen of 1884, seems to be confined to the defendant, the counsel for prosecution and defense and the talesman who are summoned from their business to tell the Court how their opinions will prevent them from being impartial jurors. The rush of the general public to the Oyer and Ter-miner Court room has not required the usual barring of the entrance, As at present constituted, the jury are:

1. MAURICE D. EGER, paints, 43 John street.
2. Frank Surpard, secretary, 813 Potter Building,
3. WM. A. Wilson, bardware 850 East Fifteenth street.

Hundred and Twenty-sixth street.

At 11.56 o'clock to day John S. Huyler, the bon-bon man, was accepted for tweifth place, and for a second there were twelve jurors facing Kerr.

Juror No. 6, Edmund E. Peck, was excused on account of sickness, however, and then a vacancy once more existed.

In an hour more, lacking eight minutes, the vacancy at No. 6 was filled by the acceptance of Frank L. Fisher, real-estate agent at 1269 Ninth avenue, living at 136 East Sixty-first street.

"The people are content with the jury as it stands," said Col. Fellows, and the court took a rocess until 2 o'clock.

The ninety-sixth bour in positively the last go-as you-please in old Madison Square Gareu, reached last night at midnight, found George Littlewood getting into a clean suit of tights preparatory to resuming the work of catching up with the record of Jimmie Albert. He had slept since a little after 9 clock, when he had scored 427 miles and 2 laps. He was ten miles and two laps behind Albert's record for that hour. But Albert vorked until midnight in his race before he lept, and his score at that hour was 450 miles and 1 lap.

Littlewood was a little stiff, and it took him we hours to get his joints in first-class working order, during which time he may have cogitated comfortably on these points :

Albert made 102 miles 1 lap on Thursday in the February race, and the blond from John Bull's Island covered only 101 miles. But Hazael made the record for the ninety-ninth hour, and Paddy Fitzgerald's score in 1884 for the twelve succeeding hours is still the record, while George Hazael comes in again for the record from the 123d to the 132d hour.

Albert made 11 miles better than Fitzger-Albert made if miles better than Fitzger-ald at the end of the race, and George Hazael did not win, although his record was nine miles better than Littlewood's at midnight. And that was only a 616-mile race, which Albert beat by 11 miles and a fraction. Albert covered only 94 miles 7 laps on Fri-day because he had a sure thing, and Satur-day he took morely an after-dinner stroll of 76 miles.

day he took morely an after-dinner stroll of 76 miles.

Littlewood started again exactly twenty-three miles behind Albert's record. That was four hours' work. There was confidence in his face as he limbered up. To beat the record at 10 o'clock to-morrow might he must cover 195 miles. He had forty-six hours to do it in and his five-mile trot would do that visually leaving him seven hours for rest to do it in, and his five-mile trot would do that nicely, leaving him seven hours for rest and "recreation."

Gus Guerrero had been industrious while the Sheffield boy was taking natural sleep, and when Littlewood resumed work the greaser was only five miles behind. But the Aztec had hardly slept a wink in twenty-four hours, and, although he ran as lightly as ever, he was not so fast, and Littlewood's face wore a satisfied smile as he looked the brown-faced Westerner over.

But Gus Guerrero is an uncertain quantity.

Jack Hughes, his left leg soaked full of liniment, hobbled painfully. He had dropped back from first to fifth place in the race, and at midnight Noremac, the drawn and campy Scotchman, caught and passed him, and Dan Dillon, cadaverous and thin, was overhauling him in the early morning.

But Old Sport Campana, who reconsidered his determination to quit, and came on again, his determination to quit, and came on again, was still left for Hughes to beat, and unless one of them drops dead the Lepper will achieve that honor.

Littlewood was twenty-three miles behind Albert's score at midnight. At 6 o'clock he was nine miles behind the record made by Paddy Fitzgerald, but only seven miles behind Albert's score at the same hour.

The following are the scores:

At 7 o'clock Littlewood recorded 461 miles, 6 laps. Fitzgerald's record was 470 miles, 5 laps at the same hour, but in his wonderful race Jimmie Albert had scored only 467 miles, 5 laps behind that score, and in good condition. The English champion was getting the benefit of Albert's slow work during Friday.

Between midnight and 7 o'clock Littlewood had run 34 miles 4 laps. The same gait until midnight would make him a record breaker, with a very easy task to-morrow to best Albert's final record.

Lan Herty's face wears the same unconcerned expression that it has borne all through the race. He has his schedule to work upon and he eares for nothing else. He has seen Guerrero run first in a race until the very last day and then suddenly drop out. He knows how much his own frame will stand, and he puts on no extra straw. At 6 o'clock this morning Guerrero was fifteen miles ahead of him.

As it becomes probable that Littlewood will break Albert's record, interest in the race grows apace, and at daybreak this morning there were 560 people in the Gardan.

There seemed to be an alliance, offensive and defensive, between Noremae and Guerrero, and they took turns in worrying Littlewood. But the cool-beaded Englishman At 7 o'clock Littlewood recorded 461 miles,

Harry Nugent removed the wrappers and disclosed a toy pistol, with some "verses" advising Sport to shoot the other fellows in the race in order to win. order to win. The verses were as follows:

'Arrah, Campana, you good eld man, Wis the race now, if you can, Leave Albert's record far behind, by that yours a walker can never find, "These are indeed swret words to you, But want they mean you'll never know. Take, then, the CANNON I inclose, And shoot those whose record o'er yours

A review of the men for the week shows remarkable records. On Monlay Gus Guererro covered only 100 miles. He was suffering all day with vertigo and mausea, but on Tuesday he ran 110 miles, and 106 miles each on Weinesday and Thursday.

Littlewood ran 137 miles in the first twenty-three hours, but he had a bad day Tuesday and travelled only eighty-eight miles, with a rusty thigh-joint giving him exquisite pain at every step. Wedinesday and Thursday he ran 101 miles each. The work of each man for each day has been as follows:

Littlewood is being urged by Guerrero today, and this will aid him in his day's work. The prospect that Littlewood will beat Albert's record results already in speculation as to a new race. If the Sheffield bloud does succed there will be a match made in the fall, which will bring out the best pair of legs in the world.

"Frozen Bill" Corney has already received a message from Charlie Rowell, who is building bosts at Cambridge, England, that he will enter any race in which Littlewood and Albert compete.

Guerrero began to show the effects of his steady running without sleep this forenoon, and the wise heads wagged ominously. Old stagers say that the Greaser will be obliged to drop to third place before midnight. The bookmakers are selling Herty for second place.

At 9.30 p. M. of the fifth day Albert's score was 534 miles. To reach that figure Littlewood must go at a twelve-minute clip all day. This is easy for him.

At noon Littlewood was only four nifes and a lap behind Albert's record, and seven miles behind Fitzgerald's score.

WATCH AND CHAIN. Scramble to Fix Up All the Jobs-The Bald Engle Thinks on Extra Session los Sure Thing-The Usual Resolutions and Addresses Characterize the Clusing Hours of the Body.

ALBANY, May 11.—The sinful Legislature of 1888 began its last day's business with a rush. But three hours were afforded to hurry through the almost innumerable jobs that lay upon the clerks' desks, and members fairly fought with each other to send their pet schemes along to the Executive chamber. The Assembly got to work at 9 this morning. The well was quickly filled by yelling members, and the Speaker's gavel was constantly in motion to preserve order. In this he was unable to succeed. An hour after business had been resumed

Judge John B. Lougley, of Kings, in a tastefully conceived speech, presented to the Speaker, on behalf of the Assembly, a $550 watch and chain. Five minutes were devoted to an examination of its beauty.

Later on the Speaker blushed on being handed a basket of flowers.

Then Gen. Husted asked that the vote by which the $1,000,000 Prison Appropriation bill was lost the other day be reconsidered. He was defeared, but 53 favoring the scheme and 40 opposing it.

The remainder of the morning was occupied in passing and killing bills. The internal tax levy, which purports to reduce the rate from 2.71-100 to 2.6-10 was approved.

The last hours in the Senate were quiet and peaceful. Bills were read monotonously. The lobby was driven forth, and Descon Richardson looked down upon the sease from the gallery. There was no excitement. The only Senator absent was Fassett, who is a very sick man. Out in the halls, however, the lobby was out in force. They displayed the most feverish restlessness to know whether the Senate intended to revoke the infamous resolution which Erwin passed has night, repealing the resolution to investigate the lobby, and particularly Ed Phelps and Eugene Wood.

Senator Linson attempted to offer a resolution to reconsider the vote on which Erwin's resolution was passed, but the "gang," consisting of Erwin and Rainea, objected.

Senator Fassett on his way bome was met at the Delsvan House by an Evenras Wont's correspondent. He declared last might's proceedings outrageous. "I am perfectly anaded at the turn in affairs, but I am so sick that it is with difficulty I can talk."

Among the last bills passed by the Senate and which will go to the Governor was the Vedder Tax bill.

Then Speaker Cole delivered his farewell address. Here it is:

GENTLENES OF THE ASSEMBLY: The hour for the final adjournment of the Assembly of 188 is at hand. Our work is done. It now reimains for the frest traduction of public opinion to determine its value. Whatever else may be speken of us, it cannot well be usid that we have not endeavored to keep in time with the highest morals of our constituents. ready to adjourn.

be said that we have not endeavored to keep in line with the highest morals of one constituents.

Many of the mignificat issues of the hour have been involved in our legislative action that season. Differences, of necessity, have arisen between the majority and minority upon this floor, but they have been fairly and candidly discussed and honestly and undisceningly decided. There has been much of partiana feeling, it is true, but there has ever been exhibited a courtesy and magninimity on the part of every leader and, indeed, of every member, which has been complimentary and gratifying in the extreme.

When we met here last January it was with mutual promises that this seasion should made be one of the abortest and cleanest in the history of the State. That these promises have been faithfully and adultance that these promises have been faithfully and independ of every member of citner house.

Duspite the findly and unavoidable delays to which we have been subjected, we have reached the hour of shall adjournment with all of the most need to legislation disposed of, and with the gratifying thought that, hotwithstanding the special and ill-concerted anxiety of partisan process to interest and prejudice public intigment, there is less of seandal stracting to this assembly than that of any of the Assemblies of recent years.

For your shally and intelligent co-operation upon the floor and your polite and ever generous treatment of the chair it is needless to say you have approfoundest thanks. I have listened to the reading of the resolutions which you have just adopted and the remarks by which they were accompanied with feedings of the deepert and most enduring gratitude. I shall never forget the kindly faces and generous impulses of the members of the Assembly of 1888. Of all the Assembles in which I have served, my recollection of this one must ever remain the pleasantest and most crateful, as the worthlest and most estimable deliberative body to which I have over been united by the bonds of political sympathy or legislating brotherhood.
